FRIDAY, JANUARY 22, 1891.

The place and time for holding the Democratic Convention will be settled to-day.

Three Democratic Senators were re-elected this week—Gorman, George and Walhall.

Rev. H. H. Kavanaugh, Chaplain of the Penitentiary, died Monday, aged 66 years.

The Elizabethtown News, whose editor is in Washington, has declared for Gorman for President.

Paducah's elegant new hotel will be called the Palmer House, after Mr. Elbridge Palmer, one of its owners. Charlie Reed will run it.

A powder mill at Kellogg W. Va. not far from Catlettsburg, Ky., exploded Monday, killing five men and injuring five others, two of them fatally.

The L & N. railroad has again been mulcted for heavy damages. A Logan county jury has given a verdict of $17,600 damages for the killing of young Nolen Edmondson, at Palmyra, Tenn., Sept. 8, 1888. This is the second time the case has been tried the first verdict gave $20,000 damages.

Gov. Brown on Tuesday appointed as Commissioner of Agriculture Mr. Nicholas McDowell, of Boyle county. He will succeed Col. Chas. Y. Wilson at once, or as soon as the Senate confirms the nomination. Mr. McDowell is 58 years old, is a farmer with a college education and was a classmate of Gov. Brown's. He was a delegate to the Louisville convention and helped nominate the Governor on the final ballot.

Congressman Scott, of Illinois, has introduced a bill of very great importance to the printers of the country. It proposes to prohibit the printing of stamped envelopes by the government. The existing law, which permits the government to enter into competition—and cut-throat competition at that—with the printing fraternity, is wrong in itself. It is an invasion of the rights of individuals that no government ought in justice to its citizens to tolerate. It destroys the printing business in many places, where a practical monopoly has been established. For once the newspapers have a chance to expect something from congressmen in return for the support given them. Woo to the member who votes against this bill.

The Chairman of the Democratic committee of Christian county is in receipt of a request from Esq. M. D. Davis, asking that a joint discussion of Alliance doctrines be arranged for Jan. 29, between Hon. Ben Terrill and Hon. Jas. A. McKenzie or some other prominent Democrat. There is not so much difference between Democracy and the reasonable demands of the Alliance that a public discussion is necessary. Upon the tariff and money questions both parties are practically together and those are the great issues before the country. It is not the policy of the Democratic party to antagonize the Alliance people. We would rather invite them into the fold to help us fight the common enemy. We have yet to find a prominent Democrat who has not the kindest of feelings for the Farmers' Alliance.

A severe Punishment.

Gilhooley—It must have been dreadful in old times when a criminal was branded with a red-hot iron whenever he committed a crime.

Cot. Varney—Yes, if that punishment was carried out now some of our public men would look like the envelope of a letter that had gone around the world.

—Texas Siftings.

The "sensitive" children.

"What worries me," said the sensitive children, "is not the fear of being roasted, but the idea that my feathers will be made into one of those awful bows, which are getting so common nowadays." —Brooklyn Eagle.

The L. W. Harper is the finest whiskey on earth. Used in moderation, it is a sure specific for general debility, for insomnia, for mental depression. It is as fragrant as ripe fruit and when used in moderation it lengthens life, adds to our joys and drives dull care away.

POTTER-MCKENZIE.

Brilliant Nuptials of Prominent Young People.

A Notable Society Event.

No more brilliant matrimonial event has taken place in Hopkinsville for many years than was the marriage of Mr. Hubert P. Potter and Miss Mamie McKenzie Wednesday evening, at the Ninth Street Presbyterian church. The church was crowded with invited guests and it was shortly after six o'clock when the bridal party entered. Charlie's band, of Nashville, made music for the occasion and the wedding march was played by Miss Mary McPherson. The decorations about the stand were exceptionally handsome. The ushers were Messrs. Walker Wood, Frank Bell, Webb C. Bell and Wm. Payne, of Clarksville. Miss Kathleen McKenzie, the bride's pretty fifteen-year-old sister, was the maid of honor while Mr. Will J. Potter was the groom's best man. These entered by opposite aisles, immediately in front of the bride and groom. Following came ten young ladies and an equal number of young gentlemen in twos, who arranged themselves about the altar in two double rows, the gentleman standing behind the ladies. The ceremony by Rev. J. C. Tate was very beautiful and impressive. At its conclusion the attendants retired in couples, being paired as follows:

Mr. A. G. Rhea and Miss Mamie McKenzie; Mr. Ed Combs and Miss Mary Luckett; Mr. Ed Hines and Miss Mary Ingram; Mr. W. V. Garvin and Miss Kate Jones; Dr. J. O. Carson and Miss Annie Harahan; Mr. R. W. Covington and Miss Maria Stacker; Mr. Henry Smith and Miss Cora Petree; Col. M. H. Crump and Miss Carrie Goodlett; Hon. W. T. Cox and Miss Mary Fairleigh; Mr. Pres. Porter and Miss Mary Radford; Mr. W. J. Porter and Miss Kathleen McKenzie.

The bridal party repaired to Dr. Hill's and after partaking of a wedding supper Mr. and Mrs. Potter left for the 10:20 morning train for a bridal trip of two weeks.

Mr. Potter is cashier of one of the principal banks of Bowling Green and is a young business man of great promise. His bride is the young and beautiful daughter of Hon. Jas. A. McKenzie—being still in her teens—and her loveliness is only equalled by her charm of manner and brightness of mind.

BACHELOR APARTMENTS.

A New Method of Living and the Lessons to be Drawn Therefrom.

The observing person has noted in some of the most accessible and attractive sections of the cities the increase of houses bearing more or less claims to style to which are given names which show that they are devoted exclusively to "bachelor" tenants. These houses have something of a change in the life of the city. It may not be that there are any more unmarried men than formerly, but they have reached a prominence by being classified and by having their needs catered to in a marked manner that argues something and which results from something.

We are very far from saying or thinking that the bonds of domestic life are loosening, or that there is less recognition of the fact that the married state is the truest and highest condition of human happiness. But it is clear that the large number of unmarried men whose means should permit them to maintain a wife and a home is suggesting to some minds a change in the old idea of marriage, based on affection and affinity, as to give color to the generalization that they are mercenary. A man must needs have no little fortitude to declare his preference for a young woman, and then to state his means and await the verdict as to his sufficiency. If matters had been thus far conducted in times gone by, the result would be as now, that few men would show themselves equal to the ordeal.

On the other hand, the young men of to-day in the struggle for that competence which they have been taught is necessary, find themselves, past the impulsive age. They acquire habits of luxury as their incomes increase, habits of living which they regard of paramount importance; habits of idleness which they think they could not be invaded upon, and the habit of being deferred to, which the single man is quite conscious of, and which he very well knows he should lose in matrimony. The unmarried man has no other advantage than his singleness, and, egotist though he may be, there will come to him—as it comes to all—the moment of humility in which he recognizes the fact. And so, little by little, the cautious, reticent, haughty grow, and the love of self and of self ways grow. These latter will soon overtop all other love, and the possibility of seeing a simpler happiness through that of others.

Look into the bachelor chambers and see if they do not seem to afford all the means for a comfortable and pleasurable existence. There are no barrenness here, no evidences of straitened means, no signs, alas! that woman's graceful offices are needed. There are books, pictures, bric-a-brac, elegant furnishings, pipes and tobacco, and all well arranged and cared for. The whole interior bears witness that the inmate has intelligence, knowledge of the world, taste, and, in short, the privileges of a favorite of fortune. Can it be expected that, thus surrounded, with no interference to his treasures, to his time or his inclination, he would voluntarily risk his security and enjoyment?

But this is the language of prudence. It is the sort of judgment parents bring to bear on all questions relating to their children's affairs. But it is wholly different from the way they themselves looked at matters in the romantic days of long ago. They felt themselves agree with all the generous impulses that belong to youth. They took chances, not in an heroic spirit, but in the reckless mood of affection that can pour out all of itself, simply because the fountain is overflowing. "Nothing venture, nothing have," is the motto that symbolizes the action of youthful passion. In its twin follow all that is charming, self-forgetful, romantic, inspiring and picturesque.—Boston Herald.

THE MODERN WAR SHIP.

Great Responsibility of the One Who Controls It in Action.

Gone are the days of the "dandy" sailing frigates, of the great three-deckers with line over line of frowning ports, tier on tier of black-mouthed cannons, the tall tapering masts and heavenward-soaring pile on pile of merrymaking rigging, the days of the old-fashioned sailing ship, the days of the close fighting, hand to hand, yard-arm to yard-arm, gun muzzle to gun muzzle, of the rush of boarders from sinking hull to enemy's deck; gone are the days of glorious Old Ironsides, of the Bonhomme Richard, the Victory and the many Arcturas. One modern cruiser could destroy a whole fleet of the old "wooden walls."

And what strange monsters are these that have replaced them! What grim shapes these iron floating fortresses of modern times, these things that glide almost noiselessly over the waves, pouring out volumes of black smoke from their great chimneys, slinging a wake of streaky milky-white with the huge blades of their powerful propellers, and cleaving the dark waters with their sharp massive rams, moving with the speed almost of a railway train! Here is a monster of the sea such as the wildest fancy of mythology never imagined!

With the change in ships has come a change in the life of the crews that man them, that sail them, that fight them. Jack has much more to learn now than had his sturdy ancestors. The delicate and complicated machinery of the modern war ship, the improved ordnance, the deadly torpedoes, the frightful power of new explosives, and the use and manipulation of all these means of defense and offense, call for an amount of preparation and training on the part of officers and men the lack of which in time of war is a judgment and experience depend on the safety of his craft and the lives of the crew, and one mistaken move on his part may cause the destruction of the vessel and give the victory to the enemy. His post is one of great danger, although protected by the heavy walls of the conning-tower, from whence he directs the course of the combat. It is exposed, from its very position forward on the deck, to the enemy's fire, and aims and detours, indeed, may be the courage of the man who in such a hell of fire and devastation can coolly watch the fire and communicate his commands to his subordinates at the guns or in the bowels of the ship. A touch of the button of one of the row of electric lights gives the order to fire gun or torpedo, or perform some maneuver or evolution, ready hands at the ammunition ladders, his orders to the engine-room, while with word or gesture he directs the course of the ship, and the steam steering-wheel revolves to port or starboard in the hands of the well-trained quartermaster. In the wild storm of battle, here in the conning-tower the mind that governs all has its place; for for victory or defeat, the thought that flashes over the wire, even to the uttermost parts of the vessel, is born here where the brain of the ship.—Harper's Weekly.

—Hop-growing is one of the remunerative industries in the state of Washington. The yield per acre is something astonishing. To obtain 600 pounds of hops, here in the conning-tower the mind that governs all has its place; for for victory or defeat, the thought that flashes over the wire, even to the uttermost parts of the vessel, is born here where the brain of the ship.—Harper's Weekly.

—Tired farmers in the neighborhood of Gerese, Idaho, are apprehensive lest their farms may sink into a subterranean lake. A man was recently digging a well, and when he had gone down sixteen feet water gushed out, filling the well and flooding the surface of the ground. Finally it settled back to the earth's level. Local people say that peculiar lightless fogs were brought to the surface in the overflow, indicating the existence of an underground lake.

MISCELLANEOUS.

—Two of the hardest things to keep in this life are a new diary and a sharp lead pencil.—Norristown Herald.

—"Poor old Lushforth fell down and broke the trestle of his nose." "Don't you mean the bridge?" "You might call it bridge, but as no water passes under it I thought the other word better."—Indianapolis Journal.

—"Miss Fitzgore—" "Well, good-by, Percival, and be a good boy!" Percival (a very good boy, who has just been specially warned not to make personal remarks about people in their presence).—"Good-by. I'll not tell nurse what I think of your nose till you're gone!"—Punch.

—Maine has only nineteen cities within its borders. Portland is the oldest city and Boxford is the youngest, having just thrown out town government. Cape Elizabeth, Brunswick, Skowhegan, "better," Farmington, Camden, Carleton and Houlton are thinking favorably of city government.

—The following are examples of eight-syllable words in the English language: Anthropometamorphosis, antispermatozoid, anticonstitutionalist, anhydriphageter, latromathematician, incomprehensibility, individualism, syncretogreomatism, unconstititionality, unintelligibility, valetudinarianism and vicissitudinality.

—There are naturalists in this day and age who believe that horse hairs will turn to living snakes that loads will live for thousands of years in the cavity of a rock without food or water; that the barnacle goose was developed from the shell-fish of that name, and that the bird called sora is a species of winged frog.

—A New Jersey truck-farmer who went to New York a few days ago took with him fifteen pearls which he had taken from mussels found in a small fresh water stream near his farm. The pearls were sold for a large sum upon the opinion of a New York expert, who said they were the finest American pearls he had ever seen.

—A new variation of the nickel-in-the-slot machine is an apparatus by which you "pay a parcel on the shelf" and have it delivered. The customer steps on a platform on which is an oblong box of steel. The top lifts open and a steel shelf comes up, on which the package is laid; the sender affixes a stamp valued at fifteen cents, and releases the box, which is sent to the warehouse, where the package is opened and the sender keeps a receipt.

Special attention will be given to all kinds of REPAIRING. Motto: Promptness and satisfaction.

His Rooms Crowded on His first Visit and Everybody SATISFIED.
